- Just a comment: Speaking about environmental protection, we should remember that when we speak about MPAs in the Med, only approx. the 1.38 % have a management plan implemented so basically this represents the real protection, so far, in the Med..considering the new targets of the 2030 Biodiversity Strategy (30% target of protection), I think that environmental protection should have a more strong focus in the MSP process..also because, as Ms Maria Ruysen, all the activities, directly or indirectly, rely on environmental resources
- To put into action the multiuses which have been proven working in research.
- Quantify the Mediterranean ecosystems services and goods for human wellbeing without compromising environmental components, and breaking the balance between socioeconomic and environment sectors. The impacts levels of all activities must be assessed jointly on habitats and biodiversity for a better governance and decision making. Taking into consideration that all blue economy is based on the marine environment quality/function and biodiversity

- I would say to involve stakeholders in the MSP process from the beginning
- to be part and ratify all regional and international related conventions and implement national rules and law concerning th MSP
- Would creating marine
